

Based on our discussion last week, we want to continue in our critical assessment of scriptural teaching, this time regarding the make up of a true Christian. The New Testament is full of admonitions to grow in Christ, to follow his example and to do God's will in our lives, yet when we look around at the vast majority of those who claim "Christianity" can we say that we all truly follow those teachings? What makes a Christian? Are there different levels of dedication in Christianity that are acceptable to God? How do we know if we are truly Christian, or if we are merely claiming a title without living the title? This program will look long and hard at what defines a true Christian and see if we can answer our question: Is everyone who goes to church part of THE CHURCH?
